Project Team in Troubsko Reviews Results to Date and Future Steps

On September 3, 2026, the project team for the project "Utilization of Silage Made from Sugar Beet Tailings and Cereal Straw During Critical Shortages of Corn Silage" (TS01020188) held a meeting in Troubsko. The main focus of the meeting was to evaluate the project's progress to date and plan future activities.

At the beginning of the meeting, Ing. Antonín Kintl, Ph.D., presented the results achieved so far. His presentation was followed by one from Prof. Ing. Tomáš Vítěz, Ph.D. The ensuing discussion centered primarily on laboratory results, their evaluation, and the potential causes of observed deviations. The team also discussed the need to launch further experiments to build upon the laboratory and pilot-scale work conducted thus far.

The meeting also addressed preparations for a planned workshop. The team discussed several organizational options, including holding the workshop in conjunction with an AgriKomp conference or hosting it independently in Troubsko.

The meeting thus provided an opportunity not only to jointly evaluate results to date but also to coordinate the next steps and plan subsequent project activities.
